'Good' ADAC ranking

A 'Good' ADAC ranking is respected around the world, and the ADAC is committed to transparency in their testing activities in support of the "Good Testing" guidelines from the Federal Ministry of Justice and Consumer Protection in Germany. The ADAC evaluates each car seat's safety, and the test's criteria are considerably stricter than those used for the EC-R44 or R129 safety standard. The effects of both a frontal collision and side impact are tested by simulating a crash using a Volkswagen Polo VI.

For big & small, for short & tall

TRES lx seamlessly follows the transition of your child from toddler to big kid. With six recline positions –two rearward and four forward-facing, it goes from cradling your napping newborn to supporting your independent tween. In what feels like the blink of an eye.
